ordered that I should remove to the "Criminal enclosure" and remain there.

As I changed my abode to the above enclosure a third time, 1 met my friend referred to once previously, and it followed as a matter of course that we birds of the same feather flocked together; he also being a political prisoner sentenced to four years* rigorous imprisonment in connection with the Tinevelly "Ash murder case". His name was Shankar Krishna lyar, a Brahmin by caste, sent to the Madras Asylum from the Rajmahendri jail, after he had done a certain portion of his term, but had turned off his head somewhat, in the course of his jail-life experiences. When I met him in the Madras Lunatic Asylum, he had recovered from the effects of the initial derangement and was quite a sensible man in every way. The lunatic Asylum at Madras appears to be one of the biggest of its kind in India; there being only another such in Colaba, Bombay, and a very recently started one at
